Manager Sees Heavy Spending

Town Manager Richard J. Bowen told the selectmen Tuesday night that Andover faces a heavy spending program and he is not optimistic about cutting expenses.

The manager gave his forecast while the selectmen were considering a letter from School Board Chairman Dr. Louis J. Galbiati Jr., with an invitation to join his proposed "Space Planning Advisory Committee for Education" which was approved at the last meeting of the school committee.

Bowen said that he thought the proposed committee might have some merit, but he also warned that some of the aspects "need a close look."

The manager said that from the time of its inception until its occupancy, the planning and construction of a school takes three years.

"If this committee can show us what we are doing and when, that's good," the manager said.

But he warned that there are other capital outlays for projects other than schools facing the town. The time has come, he said when the question: "How are you going to pay for them?" must be asked.

The manager said that a great deal of work has already been done on the planning for school sites.

He pointed out that the planning board already has surveyed five sites and of this number, three are already owned by the town. He indicated that much of this work has gone along in a routine manner and much has been accomplished which is not generally known.

"We must consider the 'physical and fiscal' needs of the town," the manager said.

During the discussion on the Future School Needs Estimated By Crimp

Selectmen Notified Of Easement

The Selectmen Tuesday night received a letter from Blake Bros. Co., 1855 Boston Rd., North Wilbraham concerning land at the corner of Pearson and North Main Streets. This is the area of the Tyer company property which the town has agreed to purchase from C. Lincoln Giles.

The Blake company informed the selectmen that they have a 20 foot easement across the northern section of the land under a reciprocal agreement with Giles. They asked the board to keep this in mind in the event a fire station is to be erected there.

The selectmen advised Town Manager Bowen to consult town counsel and obtain more information on the easement before any action is taken.

The manager said that there is a 20 foot strip on the border of the Friendly Ice Cream stand which abuts a 20 foot strip on the Giles property, the whole being used for parking.

A report of school needs through 1972 - a survey by Architect Frank Crimp - has been distributed to school and town officials and is now under study.

The Crimp Report looked into the future school needs of the town in the light of the Harrington-Willis report which was adopted by the legislature a year ago and is now being implemented in cities and towns of the Commonwealth.

Enrollment figures estimated by Crimp show that an increase of four percent in school enrollment can be expected through 1971.

It is indicated that by next September, all school buildings in the town will be overcrowded at the elementary level. However, with the opening of the new high school, accommodations for secondary school children will be adequate.

By September of 1968, all elementary buildings will again be overcrowded but junior and senior high schools will be adequate.

In September, 1969 he sees new elementary buildings in southeast Andover and West Andover in use, and elementary pupils removed from Jackson and Stowe Schools. The West Junior High School, (present senior high) building is shown filled to capacity to ease the East Junior High School during upgrading construction work and the Senior High School nearing capacity.

With two new elementary schools Southeast and West Andover, and an addition to the present West School, elementary pupils will have adequate housing by September, 1970 and there will be provision for proper relocation of special classes, he says. Secondary school buildings will be reaching capacity

Andover Navy Man Promoted

H. James Dolan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Dolan, 99 Chestnut St., has been promoted to lieutenant commander in the U.S. Navy Supply Corps.

Lt. Cmdr. Dolan is a graduate of Punchard High school with the class of 1953. He was captain of the basketball team there for two seasons and was also co-captain of football in 1952, and served as president of the student council.

He received a degree in business administration from the University of Massachusetts in 1957. He was captain of the football team there in 1956 and was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

Dolan and another Punchard graduate, Roger Barous were stars on the UMass team as students. The two were members of the football eleven, were classmates, roommates and belonged to the same fraternity.

He entered Officer Candidate School at Newport, R. I., July 1, 1957 and was commissioned an ensign in November of that year. He served with the Atlantic and Pacific fleets and was with the Bureau of Weapons at Waltham prior to being transferred to the Barber's Point Naval Air Station in Hawaii. His wife, the former Janet Valentine and their three children, Richard, Timothy and Lea are with him there.

Executive Session Called

At the request of Town Manager Richard J. Bowen, the board of selectmen went into a short executive session Tuesday night.

The manager explained that the matter had to do with land acquisition in connection with the new southeast school.

Bowen announced that a sum of money was to be mentioned in connection with the purchase of one parcel of property. He said that using the figure in public would hinder negotiations now being carried on with property owners.

Town of Andover

Water Department

During 1966 the system of water billing for the Town of Andover was converted to a computer. This conversion involved many unavoidable delays, the net result being that property owners received only one bill during the calendar year of 1966. The bill which you have received is for the first half of the year and ordinarily would have been received by you on or before June 30, 1966.

This means that in order to recover the time lost, we will be required to make 3 billings in 1967 instead of the normal 2.

We regret any inconvenience this has caused and ask your forbearance during this difficult period of transition.

Lutheran Church Bids Under Study

Bids on the construction of the new Faith Lutheran church are now under study by the architect. The bids were opened last week and turned over to the Royal Barry Wills Associates.

The new church is to be built on South Main St., across from the intersection of Ballardvale Rd.

Because of nickel stainless steel's toughness, as well as its gleaming appearance, the material is used for doors on modern bank vaults and to make safe deposit boxes.

Children's Film Series

The Pike School Alumni Association with the support of educators, civic organizations and business men in Andover will present a film festival for children on alternate Saturdays beginning Jan. 1. The film series of particular merit has been obtained to meet the needs and interests of the six through 12 year group.

Four feature children's films produced by the Film Foundation of Great Britain with the support of the British Government will be brought to The Andrews Auditorium at The Pike School on the alternate Saturday afternoons. Each program will run approximately two hours. It will consist of the feature, a short subject and a serialized adventure film that will continue through the series.

From the inception of the Foundation in 1943, it was the British idea to entertain young children on their own terms, re-creating and enlarging a world of fun and adventure without losing sight of the youngsters' basic intelligence and sensitivity. Europe has for years produced special children's films; nevertheless when introduced in New York, it was something of a surprise that our TV saturated children could Jackals live in loose groups with a constantly changing leader, whereas a wolf pack is closely knit - all the members are intensely loyal to the leader. According to the Massachusetts Audubon Society, dogs descended from jackals can transfer their devotion from master to master, but those descended from the wolf cannot.

Bosley Crowther of the New York Times called the presentation of this series "an important event" because of its "intimations of what goes well with children" and based on ear-splitting audience response, he called it a "loud success".

The New York and greater Boston areas have already tested these films. Now it is Andover's turn. New England Birds Summer In Florida

Down in Southern Florida where the natives see nothing incongruous in hanging Christmas lights on a palm tree, many New England birds are spending the holidays.

Below Lake Okeechobee thousands of tree swallows skim insects from the air. Among them may be birds born in a Massachusetts or New Hampshire backyard. Robins that may have summered in Rhode Island now flock in glistening live oaks or more weird tropical shrubs that line the marshes below the Okeechobee dikes near Clewiston. Saucy phoebes perch in trees of tropical thickets and call their names in buzzy syllables.

Black-and-white warblers that know our white pines and our oaks now creep about like so many nut-hatches along the rough plates of bark on the trunks of the southern longleaf pine. The palm warbler, which most New Englanders think of as a far northern nester, now seems present everywhere in southern Florida, although it shows no particular preference for the tree that provided it a name. In fact, the palm warbler lives in the same thickets that shelter the southern population of myrtle warblers.

The mockingbirds, whose relatives now are spreading into New England, have shown no tendency to surrender their position as the social elite of southern avian circles. They continue to sass cats, confront the redbellied woodpeckers, bully the innumerable cardinals and rule in general over all furred and feathered creatures.

But, as in all other areas, change has laid its imprint upon Florida. There are, for instance, more egrets, or at least, far more conspicuous egrets than there were twenty-five years ago. They are not the same egrets, however. The common and snowy egrets of yesteryear seem sparser than ever, although this is an off-hand observation that may have no validity. The new egret that dots the countryside with white is the cattle egret.

A recent immigrant that invaded Florida from Africa - with a stop-over in South America - the cattle egret, seems to be everywhere in Florida. The cattle egrets that occasionally wander into New England are descendants of the Florida invaders.

While fifty cattle egrets scattered over an area as large as eastern Massachusetts would cause a flurry of excitement among birders, one can see that many in a single flock in Florida. Oddly, these birds may be feeding in a narrow median strip separating U. S. Route One. They seem quite oblivious to the heavy traffic whizzing by on both sides of them.

Although our native egrets follow the life patterns of herons and remain closely associated with swamps, drainage ditches and other wetlands, the cattle egret seems a more adaptable bird. It eats insects instead of fish. The menu enables it to exist in any habitat from a swamp edge up into the dry highlands. One can even find cattle egrets pursuing insects along the dry, cindered railroad rights of way, far from water. Handbooks commonly speak of cattle egrets following cattle and snatching the insects that the animals stir into action while grazing. The cattle egret is too modern, however, to cling to such a retail existence. In the Lake Okeechobee lowlands where sugarcane grows as thick as lawn grasses, the cattle egrets prefer to follow caterpillar-tread tracks that churn up insects while

About Other Lands

The 1967 film season at Memorial Hall Library opens with two color movies set in foreign countries. Golden Fish is the tale of adventures that befall a young French boy who wins a pet goldfish at a carnival. The Bear and the Hunter is set in northern Lapland. A hunter and his dog trail a great bear through forests, valleys, streams, and into the high mountains, and still the bear is free at the end of the hunt.

These films are selected for the school age group and will appeal to both boys and girls. Those wishing to attend should meet in the Children's room at 3:30 p.m.

New Book Return

A modern book return chute for the use of library patrons is now in operation at Memorial Hall Library. It consists of a covered slot in the side of the new wing with room for parking for two cars while returning books. The area and the slot are well-lighted at night. Due to the construction, the new return may be used day or night and its capacity is such that it will handle the large number of books returned during hours that the library is not open.

Library patrons are urged to make use of the new facility on Essex Street for its convenience and because it is designed to give protection to books from the weather.

Winter Meetings

The Great Books discussions will resume after a holiday interim with Henry Adams' THE EDUCATION OF HENRY ADAMS. The next meeting is set for January 5th at the library at 7:30 p.m. The group will return to its familiar meeting room on the third floor of the main library which has been newly redecorated after serving as the home of the science and applied science collections while the addition was being built.

The room will now house the loan print collection as well as serving for library-oriented discussion. At this time of year when Christmas decorating is part of the home scene, about 20 framed prints are available for loan and the selection is more generous than later in the season. Why not ask about the print collection at the desk in the main reading room?

Recent Books

New books at the library are to be found in displays for the first week after they arrive from the work room. Thereafter for several months they are shelved in the New Books case at the far end of the fiction section. Ask for locations of books you want.

One location which is new to readers (and to the staff too!) is the Adult Reading Room where selected new titles appear on the display shelf and on two small coffee tables. This small living-room, glassed off from the main reading room, is reserved for the pleasure of adults only. It is a quiet and cheerful place to relax with a magazine, a new book or the newspaper away from the traffic and student research going on in the main room.

A Toast For 'Sixty-Seven

There are mileposts in every enterprise, just as there are in every life. They are a time to stop and take stock . . . a time to look back and to look ahead.

Looking back at 1966, we at the CO-OP can say that the year now ending was a year of change and of challenge. But with the loyalty for which CO-OP shoppers are justly famous, we can say that this consumer-owned enterprise had a good year.

What the new year will bring we cannot predict. But on one thing local shoppers can depend. This store, set up as it is to operate in the interests of the local consumer, will continue to deliver and will even try to expand that unique retail service in which the consumers' interests are our interests because "we" are in reality an association of consumers.

There can be no conflict of interest between buyer and seller where both are one and the same.

And so, for 1967 our pledge and toast is:

To The Consumer!

A Responsibility

School Committeewoman Virginia Cole hit some nerve ends when she proposed two weeks ago that athletic coaches for the public school system be restricted to handling one coaching assignment per academic year.

It is a proposal that was certain to draw blood. Game-conscious alumni, the ones more interested in a winning team than the healthful benefits of athletic activity, couldn't be expected to like it. And at least some of the coaches can be counted on to object to anything that would interfere with the opportunity to add to their basic teacher's salary, and this is wholly understandable.

But most people will be interested in hearing first the answer to the one question that must be cleared up before it can be determined if Mrs. Cole (and those on the committee who agree with her position) has a valid point: Are coaching loads so heavy that they interfere with the teacher's ability to handle his professional responsibilities in first rate form?

Athletic Director Donald Dunn says they are not, and he points to the fact that his key coaches are regarded as among the first rate classroom teachers in the Andover public school system.

On the other hand, members of the School Committee who studied athletic work schedules in connection with salary negotiations with the Andover Education Assn. were apparently startled when they saw AEA figures documenting the time spent on coaching assignments. They are inclined to think that if coaching requires such a commitment of time, it is almost certain to interfere with the teacher's professional performance, particularly during the various sport seasons.

This is the question that must be resolved.

In addition, somebody has got to talk about what a shift in athletic policy might mean to the budget. If the doubling up is eliminated and qualified coaches cannot be found within the present staff, will this mean hiring additional personnel?

Or suppose the Committee should ultimately decide to curtail classroom schedules for coaches, freeing them of some of their teacher load? William Doherty suggested this might be a solution to the problem, but it is one that would certainly lead to the need for some new staff. What would that cost?

In coming to a conclusion, the School Committee must give full consideration to the educational questions involved. But in making this and other 1967 decisions regarding personnel and standards, the policy makers must also do some evaluating in terms of the cost to the taxpayer.

School Committees don't always see it this way - but they should feel responsible to consider the overall financial commitments of the town in establishing a school budget.

Many Cared

It is often said nowadays that people do not want to become involved - they don't care.

One who doesn't share this view is Neal E. DesRoches, 72 Memorial Cir., whose 22-year-old wife, Carol, died Dec. 16 at a Boston hospital after a brave battle with a liver ailment.

Mr. DesRoches knows that many care. When his wife needed a rare blood type, more than 400 persons in this area responded. And it wasn't only in his own neighborhood that thoughtful people came forward. There was a man way up in Sacco, Maine, who called and offered to travel to Boston to share his blood with Mrs. DesRoches.

In expressing his thanks to the hundreds who offered assistance, Mr. DesRoches extended his gratitude to the Red Cross, to his fellow employees, to the Andover Fire Department, to name a few.

There were also the hundreds of letter writers who assured the troubled Andover resident that they were offering prayers, among them a number of Sisters in a convent as well as school children.

Mr. DesRoches knows that it would be impossible for him to reach all those who offered him assistance. He just wants them all to know that he's thankful for their kindness.

According to the results of a survey made by the National Federation of Independent Business, U. S. small businessmen foresee hardships from the federal minimum wage hike: 35.6 percent predict higher prices, 23.4 percent see a dip in employment, and 41 percent view a drop in profits.

Men Who Cover The War

by John Value

An exclusive Report From Vietnam

(Special to members of the New England Press Assn.)

DA NANG - They are journalism's problem children, nature's playthings - the war correspondents. A floating opera, The Lost Circus.

The last time I looked, there were 474 correspondents attending this puzzlement of a war: seventy of them were Vietnamese and 404 were from other countries. There were 180 Americans.

They come in all complexions of temperament and in all manners of dress. The television network men who wear tailored correspondent suits and custom hair-do's; the combat reporters and photographers with beards and flopping, be-ribboned hats and worn and muddy boots. The more conservative field men in service fatigues, who might be taken for soldiers or Marines except that none of their clothing seems to fit. The Saigon commandos, those political reporters who rarely leave the capital city and whose garb might be called Tropical Ivy League. Oh, my! There are some dudes.

And mostly good fellows. The best, in fact. Meet some:

- Jerry Forkin of Stars and Stripes, a reedy playwright from Galway who joined the Army in order to be able to cover Vietnam. One night at Marble Mountain a fire fight broke out. The sights of three rifles suddenly trained on a weird form skittering down the hamlet's muddy street. It was Forkin, yelling in Gaelic, his pants in one hand, his shillelagh waving in the other.

- Bill Langly, a 6'4" giant from the Portland, Maine Press-Herald, returned from a night patrol with his hand painfully nettled by a cactus. He spent the rest of the night fretting, afraid he wouldn't be able to type the next day.

- Tim Page, a somewhat supercilious British freelance, walked into the Press Center after four bloody days with the Korean Tiger Division. "Yes," he said, "we counted 87 VC dead. I imagine there were 200. The Koreans had 10 killed, 16 hurt. Some of the VC had no visible wounds. Just broken necks. Karate, don't you know." He looked up at the television and then at the bartender. "Oh, God, Not Ed Sullivan. Lam, bring me a gin and tonic, would you? And turn that damned thing off."

- Jim Lucas, who has won the Pulitzer and whose first war to cover was World War II. He has been here for three years and could go home whenever he wanted. But he stays on. He is not a war lover.

- Charles Durden, a slight young Georgia boy with none of the patience in the world and little of the fear. Held up for clearance for a mission by a rather vain reporter he poked him in the chest, saying: "Listen, jerk, I have 80 papers in 10 states and 20 million readers. I have one minute, bum. Get out of my way." He got out of the way, astonished and Durden, the pocket pulverizer, walked toward his jeep with a grin. "Well," he told a friend, "it sounded good."

Down The Years

75 Years Ago - December, 1891
We would correct a statement made last week in the item about the marriage of Harry M. Eames, that he was a son of Plato Eames, for he is not.

Although we have no desire to deprive North Andover of any of her good citizens, yet Mr. John F. Kimball and family will be welcomed as new residents of this town, they having moved into their new house on Central Street.

The employees of the Tye Rubber Co. each received a Christmas gift from this flourishing concern in the shape of an extra dollar in their pay envelopes last week.

Frederick Sutcliffe and Sarah J. Trulan both of this town were united in marriage last Friday at St. Augustine's Church by Rev. J. J. Ryan.

Miss Mary E. Manning has resigned as a teacher in the Osgood School. Miss Alice Bodwell will take her place.

50 Years Ago - December, 1916
Frank L. Cole and Virgil D. Harrington are spending a few days in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. John L. Morrison of Elm Street is spending two weeks in New York City with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Morrison.

Lewis G. Holt, brother of Brooks F. Holt of this town, died at his home in Lawrence Saturday.

Miss Gertrude Berry of Jackson College is home for the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon O. Dunklee of Florence Street spent the Christmas holidays in Fairhaven.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donovan and family spent the Christmas holidays with relatives in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall spent Christmas with Mrs. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Ward.

There are more spindles turned in the mills of Lawrence by the power of the Merrimac River than are turned by any other river for any other city in the world. Four hundred acres of mills, employing 40,000 hands, put out 2,000,000 tons of woven fabrics each year.

10 Years Ago - December, 1956
The Burr Plan has been approved in principle for the junior prom next spring. Headmaster Lindsay March asked the committee's approval of the plan which provides afterprom entertainment until well into the morning.

The plan was started in Methuen by Theodore Burr, a member of that town's School Committee, as a means of keeping the teenagers at home after the prom. Burr is now an Andover resident.

Hartwell B. Abbot Jr. and Ray S. Youmans Jr. students at New Hampton School, New Hampton, N. H., are home for the Christmas vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Moss of Andover Street spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moss and daughter Sandra in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Moody and sons of Clark Road had as their Christmas guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Zocco of Danvers, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hibbert of Andover and Samuel Moody.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:

I am shocked and appalled to read serious consideration is being given to Mrs. Cole's completely unqualified opinion the Andover School System should limit our athletic coaches to coaching one sport per academic year. That the matter was even broached is and of itself startling enough but to learn this is to occupy the time of the School Committee as well as the time of others, is so redundant I feel compelled to write my first letter ever to an editor.

The proposal has obviously been fostered by the Andover Taxpayers Association who have already led us down the primrose path on numerous occasions. Who can forget that eloquent plea about the auditorium in the new high school that resulted in costing us taxpayers more money because of the delay?

There is much more to be learned from schooling than just that which is taught in the classroom. Sports, of all kinds, is only a small but integral part of the extras of education and we in Andover should be very proud of our athletic program. I am not only referring to the won and lost records either. The program is only as effective as the men and women participating as coaches; from the Junior High level on up. The very large turn out of students for all of the various teams is more than ample proof of the results of the program. The one weakness in the program is the fact we have inadequate facilities which prevent many more students from actively participating in all athletic endeavors.

Very few teachers qualify as coaches and even fewer good teachers qualify as good coaches. Andover is indeed fortunate to have several men and women who fall in the latter category in the Junior High School as well as the Senior High School. An important and happy fact is that this includes the assistant and junior-varsity coaches as well. Ask any student whom they consider the most effective teachers and each one will include some of the coaches. An effective teacher is the one who knows how to reach the student and create an interest in knowledge of any kind. Education is not only for the gifted student. As a matter of fact, educators are now greatly concerned over whether or not they have become too slanted toward the gifted student, at the expense of the majority.

My sons and daughter have never encountered any difficulty in obtaining extra help from teachers after school and all three have had coaches for teachers somewhere along the line. Let's let the educators run our school athletic program without interference from unqualified individuals.

Robert W. Hanson
84 High Plain Rd.

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:
Do you realize that most of the public school teachers of the U. S. would be eligible for funds under the guaranteed annual wage measure of the poverty program? Ridiculous, isn't it!

Virginia M. Berg
19 Argilla Rd.

Channel 2 Highlights Jan. 1-7
There'll be three top-notch dramas, a sharp debate on Massachusetts auto insurance rates, a new class for creative knitters (beginners and experts) who want to learn principles as well as techniques, the hot jazz trumpet of Al Hirt, a live Boston Symphony Orchestra telecast, the return of Colette Shulman with herceptive comment on the Soviet press, the New England premiere of one of the most popular series ever produced for children, and much, much more.

It all begins the week of Jan. 1. Here's the line-up, starting at 7:30 on New Year's Day with a variety of fine programs for holiday viewing:

1:30 - LINCOLN CENTER STAGE 5 An opera, ballet and drama all based on a short play by Frank Gilroy depicting the anguish of a young man who seeks punishment for an unpunishable crime.

8:30 - THE DANCE THEATER OF JOSE LIMON in which the famous dancer and his company perform "Moor's Pavanne" based on Shakespeare's "Othello" and "Missa Brevis."

9:30 - DEAR LIAR, repeat of a WGBH favorite - Jerome Kilty's play based on 40 years of correspondence between G. B. Shaw and the actress Mrs. Patrick Campbell, with Kilty as Shaw and his wife, Cavada Humphrey as Mrs. Pat. DEAR LIAR will also be aired Monday, January 2 at 3 p.m. for the convenience of viewers.

As Others See It

Bedeveling the whole question of state aid to church-related schools in America is the so-called "child benefit" or "pupil benefit" theory. This theory holds that the purpose of the state aid, in a given case, is to benefit the pupil not the religious institution, and hence does not involve the use of public funds to support churches, as forbidden by the First Amendment.

With the expansion of federal programs to aid education, the "child benefit" concept has more and more tended to become an excuse for justifying the flow of public funds to church institutions themselves. When the concept is interpreted broadly and loosely, what is said to be aid to the child is, in point of fact, aid to the church school.

We hope that the present Supreme Court, when an appropriate case comes before it, will re-examine the "child benefit" theory and will ask itself whether aid to the children rather than to the school is a distinction that, practically speaking, really does distinguish. We don't think the distinction will stand up under searching analysis.

Under this theory, aid to the child or aid to the church school has been considered an either-or proposition. True, in some cases the principal aid can clearly be said to be to the child, in others to the church schools.

But the fundamental flaw in the theory is that in the vast majority of cases aid to the one so inextricably benefits the other that it becomes highly artificial, if not deceptive, to argue that the aid is to the child and not to the church school. In these cases, whatever the alleged intent, the actual effect is to pump public funds into church schools, contrary to the First Amendment.

The original Supreme Court precedent that stated the "child benefit" concept was decided in 1930. Given the experience of the past 36 years, can the court justify hanging onto this theory? If the 1930 logic was faulty, as we believe it was, it would be entirely proper for the court to modify or abandon the theory, close the escape hatch, and keep public funds out of church treasuries.

Fens Have Monetary Value

How much are muck and mud worth when left as muck and mud?

If the terms "muck and mud" may be interpreted to mean inland marsh-and most persons seem to think of a marsh in those terms - it apparently is worth not less than $350 to $400 per acre.

At least, a team of biologists in New York State arrived at such an estimate. They based the estimate upon the known economic returns from marshlands.

To keep the estimate on the conservative side, they reduced the real income to fantastically low fractions of the known returns. For instance, they knew about a marsh from which a fishing bait dealer had taken an average annual harvest of $300 per acre in fish bait. To be fair in estimating the average marsh's value, they reduced the bait harvest value of a marsh to $5 per year.

They found that a 900-acre state-owned marsh in New York was producing a business return to the nearby community of $21 an acre yearly from the expenditures by duck hunters alone. At another marsh, which was a sanctuary, a community close by was realizing an annual return of $15 per acre in business volume from birders. But, to adjust these figures for an average marsh, they allowed only $1.05 per acre for duck hunters and 75 cents per acre for birders.

By figuring the value of a duck at $5 - the current price at shooting preserves in the area - they figured the average economic production from duck usage and production of ducklings to flying age at $1.10 per acre. The figure was adjusted back from known production rates in good marshes which average a value of $10 per acre.

In furbearer production, they estimated a marsh's value at $3 per acre for muskrats and 32 cents an acre for mink pelts - plus 25 cents per acre for raccoon pelts.

In New York, as in New England, marsh edges are prime pheasant territory. At $5 per pheasant - again the shooting preserve price - the marsh edge produces sufficient pheasants to justify a 48-cent credit per marsh acre. Actually, the researchers found that in pheasant territory, the true figure was nearer $1.43 per acre.

The survey made no attempt to place a price on the intangible values of the marsh. There was nothing for aesthetics, nothing for the reduction in service costs to the town, nothing for educational use by schools - indeed, marshes received no credit at all for most of the things that seem valuable to those who value marshes.

After having established an array of money values which could be defended in any economic arena, the researchers then fell back upon a minimum income that a community receives each year from activities around a marsh. This figure they placed at $20 a year per acre.

Using the figure as income representing a five percent return on investment, they arrived at the real value of muck and mud - about $350 to $400 per acre.

New York marshes - and these were upstate marshes - are so similar to marshes in any New England state that their values must be comparable.

Notoriously bad tempered is the black rhinoceros; only the little tick bird is a friend. If a female feels amorous she charges and goes a likely sutor; if two bulls meet they do battle until one or both dies. But, the Massachusetts Audubon Society reports, of all African animals the rhino is the most easily tamed.

VACATION WORK — Michael and Clifford Bruno, 16 Shipman Rd. put their time to good use over the weekend as they cleared away the heavy snow which fell early Sunday morning. (Cal)

Highway Death Toll May Get Worse

Chicago — "Despite the new federal safety regulations, the traffic death toll may get worse before it gets better," warns Harry Porter Jr., manager of the National Safety Council's traffic department.

Pointing out that it will take a number of years for the new vehicle standards and expanded highway safety programs to take effect, Porter listed the following "negative" factors that will tend to push death totals up in the years immediately ahead:

1. More young drivers
2. Higher speeds
3. Motorcycles
4. Increasing travel
5. Failure to use seat belts
6. Alcohol consumption

"In the face of these almost overwhelming pressures, it seems tips for safe winter driving have been advocated by the National Safety Council's committee on winter driving hazards:

1. Get the "feel" of the road by accelerating carefully to see if wheels spin; or brake gently to see if they skid. Reduce speed accordingly.
2. Increase your following distance. It takes three to ten times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement.
3. "Pump" your brakes to slow or stop — don't jam them on. An intermittent pumping action keeps the wheels rolling and helps maintain steering control.
4. Have good tires with good treads. Better yet, use snow tires which provide half again as much pulling power in snow as regular tires. Studded snow tires* offer still more help on icy surfaces.

5. Always carry reinforced chains in the trunk of your car in case of severe snow and ice conditions. They provide five times as much traction in snow or ice as regular tires.

6. Keep your windshield and windows clear at all times. Replace streaking wiper blades gone from exposure to sun, wind and road film. Be sure that your windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze.

"Each of these admonitions," Porter concluded, "calls for distinct personal response. By accepting these down-to-earth commendations, a driver demonstrates the kind of personal responsibility that is going to be required to reverse current accident trends."

*Note: As of November, 1966, the use of studded tires is prohibited in the following states: Alabama, Arizona, California, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia.

The Safe Winter Driving League presents the above test results of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards and points out that it may take almost ten times as far to stop on glare ice as on dry pavement. Regardless of the type of traction device employed — even with tire chains — far slower than normal speeds are essential on ice-covered pavements.

almost certain that the total number of fatalities will creep slowly upward for several years at least, barring any major economic or military reversals," said Porter. "By then we hope and believe that the positive pressures resulting from new legislation will begin to take effect, turning the accident curve downwards."

In the meantime, the safety authority cautioned drivers not to expect any overnight lessening of traffic hazards. "On the contrary," he warned, "the next few years will be an especially crucial time for drivers when it will be up to the individual to accept the responsibility for his own well-being as never before."

As a timely example, Porter cited the added hazards facing drivers during the critical winter months and pointed out that safer winter driving is largely a matter of individual responsibility.

"Reduced visibility and inadequate traction are the principal additional hazards of winter driving over and above those normally encountered all year," he stated.

When you suddenly come upon an icy patch of pavement, be sure your front wheels are rotating if you are trying to turn. Hard braking will lock them. Then the tires act like sled runners and you slide straight ahead. Pump your brakes and slow down, they coast over the ice. Above all, when streets and highways are slippery, avoid sudden moves.

Snow, Ice Harmful To Trees

Trees, and shrubs need a helping hand during winter snow and ice storms. Frequently, winter storms break tree branches or twist them out of shape. Such winter hazards often impair future tree growth and destroy the natural beauty of many trees.

This is particularly important on yew and such broadleaf evergreens as boxwood, mountain laurel and rhododendron. If evergreens are piled high with snow, raise the branches carefully by hand and shake gently. Do not pound the tops. Snow becomes dangerous on deciduous shrubs and trees when it is wet and there is a chance that it will freeze. Ice is even more dangerous, as its weight causes numerous tree branches to split. A few sharp knocks with a pole or stick will bring down much of the ice relieving the burden of weight from the branches.

If you have fruit trees, tamp the snow around the base tightly with your foot. This will prevent the snow melting quickly and forming an air pocket in which rabbits, mice and moles may burrow and chew on the bark and roots. One of the best methods of preventing rodents from damaging trees in winter is to place a wire mesh guard around the base of the trunks, since trees girdled by chewing rodents usually die.

Salt should be used sparingly this winter when melting ice and snow on driveways and walks. Common salt or calcium chloride, which is used as a substitute, seeps into the soil and severely injures trees, shrubs and other foundation plantings. Next spring their leaves will appear as though scorched and lacking the lustre of a healthy green. Evergreen needles will also appear brown and drop.

Sand or ashes should be used rather than salt. If you must use salt in quantity, flush the soil around the roots with water early next spring to reduce the harmful effects of the chloride. Remember, too, that salt used on frozen gutters is just as dangerous when it melts and drips onto lawns and foundation plants.

Shopping Habits Under Study By Students

Students in the marketing course at Merrimack College are undertaking a study of consumer shopping and buying habits in the Greater Lawrence area under the direction of Professor Richard A. Wills. This study is an extension of the marketing research project carried out in the area by the students last year.

Residents of the Lawrence, Methuen, Andover and North Andover areas are being selected at random by the students and given a questionnaire. Some of the questions asked are: Where they shop? What they like about the store? Why they shop there? How often? Occupation? Number and age of children? Number of years of education? and General age bracket of the consumer?

The material will then be classified for predictable patterns of consumer behavior. The study is being done as a community service in hopes of identifying what people consider important when they shop for products on the market.

The study will continue through the month of February, all information received will be held confidential.

Wine Expert To Address Women's Club

A festive experience in wine tasting, featuring Ruth Ley, is planned for Monday, January 2, when the Shawsheen Village Woman's Club meets at the Andover Country Club at 1 p.m.

Club members and friends will have the opportunity to educate their palates on fine wines under the tutelage of Ruth Ley, who will incorporate a film and lecture into the afternoon's program.

The color film, "Romans, Germans, and Wine," takes the viewer from the old Roman ruins in Trier, Germany, along the Moselle River to the great Rhine with its ancient castles and vineyards sweeping to the river. A visit is also made to the gay "weinstubes" where Germans sing, dance, and drink wine.

Mrs. Ruth Ley has been in newspapers, radio, and television. She has traveled far, photographing interesting areas of the world and has specialized in the wine areas. She has made more films on the subject of wine than anyone else in either Europe or America and her reputation is international. Her knowledge of wine and her work in stimulating interest and enthusiasm for fine wine has resulted in the awarding to her of the gold medal of Le Comite des Vins de France and the showing of one of her films at the Seattle World's Fair.

Members are urged to attend what will be an enjoyable afternoon and are reminded that guests are most welcome. A nominal fee only is required for non-members.

Hostess chairmen for the meeting are Mrs. Thomas Marjerson and Mrs. Weston Eastman.

Extra cooking chores for holiday guests can really be dangerous unless you maintain your kitchen in apple-pie order, reports the Institute for Safer Living. A drawer left open or a cupboard door left swinging while you dash between stove and refrigerator can result in nasty bruises and scars. A neat kitchen is a safe kitchen!

at this time, the report states, Crimp suggests that in September, 1971, all elementary school buildings will be nearing capacity, the junior high school buildings will be nearing capacity and a third junior high school building will be under construction. The senior high school will remain adequate with an addition he finds.

In estimating the town's future needs, the architect used the 25 pupils per room formula contained in the Willis report.

Figured on this standard, the capacity of the elementary schools are Jackson, 100; Stowe, 150; Shawsheen, 340; West, 340; Central, South and Sanborn 530 each.

The enrollment projects for the next six years are as follows:

License Action Delayed

A request from John B. White Jr., manager of the Andover Beverage Mart, Inc., for a change of location and resultant transfer of license was before the selectmen Tuesday night as they sat at the license commission.

The transfer calls for a shift from the rear of Lot No. 77 Main St. to Shawheen Plaza Shopping Center, 221 North Main St.

When Town Manager Bowen advised the board that action could not be taken for 10 days and must be taken within 30 days, the members voted to take the matter under advisement.

Following this action, Chairman

Stewart suggested that since the selectmen issue liquor licenses they should be kept informed on the type of enforcement which is carried out in the town regarding the laws of lighting, exists, number allowed to assemble, etc.

The manager said that he would ask the town clerk to provide copies of all pertinent laws and would make a report on compliance at a future date.

Sanitary Code Regulations Discussed

An informal meeting was held Tuesday evening in the selectmen's office with officials of the planning board and the board of health on hand.

Selectmen Roger Collins, Robert A. Watters, Sidney P. White and William Stewart were present. Selectman Philip K. Allen was absent from Tuesday's meeting.

Planning Board Chairman Harold T. King, Board of Health Chairman Robert A. Walsh, and Public Health Director Elizabeth Nelson R. N., were on hand, together with Robert McQuade, sanitary engineer for the meeting.

The group discussed the installation of septic tanks, especially in view of new regulations which become effective on Jan. 1.

Chairman Walsh of the board of health said that Andover's regulations on the installation of septic tanks are as strict as any in the state and have been used as models for other communities.
